Research inference and linguistic shows have drawn conclusions that our education has favoured linguistic and mathematical intelligence and the IQ tests are based on these aspects. The creative angle is ignored and thus the development of other complementary facts of intelligence lay dormant. Reading this in the light of the parts of Astang yoga. Thus the yoga tradition addresses fully well most of these intelligence.

Ashtang Yoga:
Although there are several schools of yoga and their approach may be different but the assumptions at the core are same.

1. Mind and the Body are connected with one's health and also affects one another.
2. Yogasanas practised regularly and relaxation exercises would revitalize and have tranquillizing effects on the system.
3. This discipline that starts at this level of the body soon moves to the mental aspects. This is reflected with an increase in the effectiveness of an individual in any task he/she undertakes.
4. Balance is important in all that one neither indulges or deprives.
5. It is essential to develop a healthy attitude such as cleanliness and contentment.
6. Psychological and mental stress work, through introspection and various meditational method, is the aim of bringing about clarity of understanding and self-awareness.
7. Also yoga offers a harmony with oneself, others and also nature.

In school yoga is to be taught to children in a simple manner, especially to children of all ages. To bring out their physical, mental and creative energies in a constructive manner so as to lead to self confidence and self awareness.

Students should be made to realise the importance, and if then they take interest, a spare time additional coaching class be arranged. The basic exercises which the students need are rhythmic movements and some selected simplified asana for stretching and toning the muscles, thus creating flexibility within the skeletal system as well as to develop and maintain the nervous system and endocrinal system.

The development can be measured as heightened sensitivity, balanced energy and improved attentiveness. Every student can thus share the positive findings with each other and then this would result in many insights and solve the problems of the students as well as the teacher.

A patent program for teachers forms the basis for a new approach of teaching. It is immaterial of the subjects they teach. Teachers can exhibit these skills at the start of each class session for first few minutes. Please note that teachers themselves will benefit from using the yogic approach and in turn will improve effectiveness in the classroom.
